WHEELING, MARCH 5, 1895.

The Indirect Tax.
The Fifty-third Congress with its dying breath did a good thing in passing the West Virginia direct tax resolution. —Register.

When the direct tax bill was pending before the Fifty-first Congress (the "Red" Congress), and was passed by the Republicans of that body, nearly every Democratic paper and the Democrats in Congress howled that it was unconstitutional and a Republican scheme to plunder the treasury.

The bill passed the house by 172 to 101. Only 28 Democrats voted for it. Only 7 Republicans voted against it. At that time West Virginia was represented in the house by two Republicans, Messrs. Atkinson and Smith, and two Democrats, Messrs. Alderson and Wilson. The Republicans voted for the bill to pay back to West Virginia $181,306 93. One Democrat, Mr. Wilson, voted against that bill, and the other Democrat, Mr. Alderson, is not recorded as voting at all.

It was for services supposed to have been rendered in this matter that ex-Governor E. Willis Wilson and the late Beverly Tucker, of Virginia, set up a claim for $18,000, being 10 per cent of the amount. This a Democratic legislature agreed to pay, although there is in the bill an explicit provision that no part of the money "shall be paid out by the governor of any state or territory, or any other person to any attorney or agent under any contract for services now existing or heretofore made between the representative of any state or territory and any attorney or agent." There was no need of the services of claim agents and it was not intended that they should profit by the passage of the bill.

As for the Register, its position with regard to this bill is odd; in fact, it is two-fold. It now thinks that the Democratic Fifty-third Congress has done something to redeem itself by passing the direct tax resolution. Four years ago, to-wit, on March 21, 1891, it thought the Republican Fifty-first Congress had done a bad thing to pass the direct tax bill. In that day the Register thought the legislature should have spared the money and refused to accept it. Here is what the Register thought in its own words:

THAT DIRECT TAX.
There is very little doubt that the states generally would be better off in the end if this money collected by direct taxation in the year 1891, were not distributed among them. The tendency is demoralizing to thrift and economy. The states which will get these $18,000,000 are bettering their hands over the question of what to do with it. It must, inevitably, in a degree, at least inspire extravagance, as all unearned money does. Already in Ohio the politicians are fighting out the way in which it can be made to pass into or through the hands of partisans on one side or the other.

The situation, indeed, is fast becoming a repetition of that which followed the action of Congress in 1836 distributing the treasury surplus of that date among the states. The demoralizing effect of that gratuity is a matter of history. There was a scramble to secure the money, and the states, through which it was wasted in almost every instance, and instead of a benefit, it generally proved a curse to the community receiving it.

The Register opposed the Direct Tax Refunding bill from the start, on the grounds stated, and it would have been a credit to West Virginia and an example to the worthy members of other states had the legislature refused to accept the portion credited to West Virginia, and thus put the stamp of its disapproval on the looting of the treasury. But since the legislature did not possess so much Spartan virtue and accepted the money, the Register advised, and still advises, as the best method of disposing of it, that it be used for the improvement of country roads. Having accepted this unearned money, that, in our opinion, is the best use it can be put to.

Two years ago President Cleveland properly vetoed this direct tax refunding bill, basing his constitutional objections to the bill on the ground that it provided, not for an act of rearmament, but an outright gift to certain number of citizens of money raised by taxation of all citizens. This, he held, was something which Congress had no power to do. As for its practical justice, Senator Blair at the same time showed that the state of New Hampshire would receive less out of this gratuity than what she had to pay as her share of the taxes appropriated for that purpose.

It has been suggested already, in the case of New York, that the matter be brought before the courts by an application for a writ to restrain Governor Hill from using the money for which he has made requisition.

If it would have been highly expeditious as well as sublimely virtuous to refuse to accept the money in 1891, wouldn't it have been as meritorious to let the thing alone in 1895, making no effort to get the money? The Register had doubtless forgotten what it said four years ago, and remembered only that now it had to deal with the act of a Democratic Congress.

Now for the next foreign title. We have a few more heiresses left, all warranted to suit the most fastidious taste.

One Silver Centurion.

The silver men, who objected to this country taking part in an international monetary conference, cannot object to the representatives selected, for they are pretty well advanced on the silver line. On the part of the senate, Messrs. Jones, Toller and Daniels go into the conference with the idea that this country can take care of itself on the silver question without any foreign assistance. They think that on a silver basis we can stand alone against all the rest of the world.

On the part of the house Speaker Crisp is to be one of the conferees. He has been on both sides of the question, but at heart he is a silver man. What- ever may come of the conference it will be impossible to say with truth that the interests of the United States were in the hands of "gold bugs."

If the result be an international agreement to give to silver a wider use as a money metal, something substantial will have been gained.

The best thing about the Fifty-third Congress is that it is no more.

A Decided Difference.
The Republican "billion dollar Congress" did not pile up its appropriations in the face of a treasury deficiency, but the Democratic "billion dollar Congress" has done this very thing.

The Congress which cut down the revenues did not stop to think where the money is to come from to meet its appropriations. The matter of ways and means was left to its Republican successor, which will be confronted at the start with an overflow of serious problems.

No matter how serious the questions may be, the country confidently expects the Republican party to be equal to them. This is why everybody looks for a better state of things even before the Republican Congress meets and although it will have to face a Democratic President.

It should be borne in mind that some things cannot be accomplished before there is a change at the white house as in Congress.

In the spirit of Jay Gould was at the Gould-Castellane wedding, it must have writhed. It cost effort to gather up those millions.

"The Secret of the Straits."

Refusal to pass the Nicaragua canal bill is spoken of as one of the good things done by the dead Congress. It is to be hoped that the next Congress will do better by passing a bill to insure the completion of the great canal, and that under complete control of the United States.

The canal will cut in half the distance by water from New York to San Francisco. It will reduce greatly the cost of carrying bulky freights. It will open up new markets for the coal of West Virginia. It will realize the dream of Columbus and open to the world "the secret of the straits."

In these days whatever relates to the income tax is of interest, almost as much so to those who have as to those who have not the tax to pay. The Boston Book Company has just issued "A Treatise on the Federal Income Tax," by Roger Foster and Everett V. Abbott. The work brings the subject down to date and is by odds the best thing of its kind. It goes into the history and the theory of the law, is rich in authorities and shows what remedies may be employed to resist payment of the tax. It is a very valuable publication.

The once prosperous Chicago Times has been merged into the Chicago Herald, the amalgamation becoming the Times-Herald. In the days when Wilbur F. Storey was in his prime the Times was regarded as one of the fixed institutions of Chicago. Since it passed from Storey the history of the Times has been one of varying misfortune.

When General Dan Sickles wakes up he is likely to make the fur fly. What torture it must have been to his Democratic associates in the house to hear him exclaim: "Let us pass one good bill as an atonement for all the bad ones we have passed." It was a pension bill and he made them pass it.

AN all night session of Congress always looks ragged at the end, but they do say that the one just passed was a little more so than usual. Most of the statesmen were "down on their luck" and unable to see any bow of promise in the sky.

THE Fifty-third Congress is dead; wherefore it would seem ungracious to speak ill of it. The record it made speaks for itself.

Even the President may be supposed to feel better now. It was something of a nightmare to him as well as to the country.

Lansing, Mich., has a matrimonial club, whose members at intervals choose one of their number whose duty it is to get married within a year. The club claims that in every instance the chosen one carried out his orders faithfully.

The oldest woman in North Carolina is said to be Mrs. Katherine Boshae. She has lived to see her fifth generation and is still in good health. Her exact age is not known, but it is supposed to be between 115 and 120 years.

John Nogard, a Bradford (Pa.) lumberman, went hunting rabbits with a shotgun and cornered a 425-pound bear. He was fight or climb, and Nogard managed to shoot straight, killing Bruin at the first shot.

At the McCormick theological seminary eighty-three of the divinity students are the sons of farmers; thirty-one of ministers, twenty-three of merchants, three of lawyers and three of physicians.

The colored congregation of a Shelbyville, Mo., church has given notice that it will prosecute any person running horses, drinking liquor or using curs words within 100 yards of the sacred edifice.

Warrensburg, Mo., claims the champion tree climber in the person of William Long, sixty-six years old, who, seeing a con run up after him, climbed a foot tree, ran up after him.

The smallest church edifice in the world is at the mouth of the Saginaw river. Its capacity is eighteen persons. Boston club women have voted to subscribe $200,000 for the purpose of building and furnishing a club house.

Pain and Distress in Stomach.

Weak, Tired and Nervous.

Liver and Bowels out of order.
Nerves weak.
Could not sleep.

Mr. James Meehan, who resides at 57 Granite Street, Quincy, Mass., says:—
"I was taken sick with liver disease and ulceration of the bowels. My heart was also affected. I was confined to my bed three months.
"A consultation of physicians was held, and was pronounced incurable. After that I stopped taking their remedies, and began the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.
"Previous to this I could not sleep, my nerves were excitable and spasmodic, my stomach would not bear food, vomiting almost constantly. Soon after beginning this remedy I slept better, and my stomach would bear light food.
"I continued to take it until I could get out. I now work all the time, and feel that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy saved my life."
He was made well by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

Mrs. J. W. Beale, who resides at 52 Eastern Avenue, Worcester, Mass., makes the following statement:—
"I was sick for more than seven years, not able to do my household work for five years. I employed more than sixteen different doctors without benefit. The whole length of my spine was very bad, which went to my head, being so bad that it was about impossible for me to stoop to the floor, or turn my head to the right or left, my neck was so stiff.
"I was unable to comb my hair, the nerves of my head were so sore. I also had convulsions and kidney trouble.
"After a time I was persuaded to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Words cannot express my wonderful cure! Now all is changed, and I am strong and well, and able to do all my work. I have gained 25 pounds in weight, and where before all was gloom and despondency, there is now light and hope.
"Words cannot express my feelings! Thanks to God, and the wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I am cured. I write this with the desire that others may be influenced to use this wonderful medicine as I did and be cured."

PERSONAL POINTS.

When the city of Chicago began a movement to compel the railroads leading from that city to the southwestern states to revise the discriminating rates which were alleged to have been made in the interest of eastern cities, the question as to whom should be selected as the chief counsel, to take charge of the entire case for the city, was promptly disposed of by retaining ex-Senator Edmunds, of Vermont.

During his four months' sojourn General Booth traveled 18,458 miles, spent 1,847 hours on the cars, wrote 216 letters and 11 articles on his work, spent 429 hours in army business and made 47 short and 203 long addresses to 437,500 persons.

Democrats Swallow a Sugar Pill.
New York Mail: Every Democrat who voted for the payment of the sugar bounty was guilty of political inconsistency and antagonized a party principle. It is a Democratic contention that the payment of bounties is unconstitutional. Yet when the proposition to pay the sugar bounty for the current year was voted on Democratic senators who voted in the affirmative were more numerous than those who voted in the negative. In a vain effort to carry favor with Louisiana sugar planters the majority renounced a Democratic doctrine.

Society.
William Dean Howells in Harper's Magazine.

I looked and saw a splendid pageantry Of beautiful women and of lordly men. Taking their pleasure in a flowery plain. Where poppies and the red anemone. And of another kind of scenery. Flickered about their feet, and gave their stain To heels of iron or satin, and the grain Of lichen garments floating far and free.

As in the dances they move themselves, or strayed By two together, or lightly smiled and bowed, Or curtsied to each other, or else played At games of skill and justice, unafraid. In their delight, and all so high and proud. They seemed scarce of the earth whereon they trod.

I looked again and saw that flowery space Stirring, as if alive, beneath the tread That rested now upon an old man's head, And now upon a baby's grasping face. Or mother's bosom, or the round bare crease Of a girl's throat, and what had seemed the red Of flowers was blood, in gouts and gushes shed From hearts that broke under that fragile pace. And now and then from out the dreadful floor An arm or brow was lifted from the rest, As if to strike in madness, or implore Or murmur, or when some motherly breast Heaved from the mass and sank; and as before The revelers about them thronged and pressed.
